

Annex A: New ISDA Protocol Will Limit Buy-Side Remedies in a Financial Institution Failure

Below is a summary of some of the key terms in the Protocol. The terms of the Protocol are complex and vary depending on the relationship between the parties and the terms of the documentation, as described in more detail below.

The Protocol does not apply to an ISDA Master Agreement or any credit support document unless both of the parties to the ISDA Master Agreement or both of the parties to (or both the provider and the beneficiary of) the credit support document adhere to the Protocol.

Special Resolution Regimes (“SRRs”) Covered by the Protocol

- The Protocol initially covers the existing resolution regimes in France, Germany, Japan, Switzerland, the United States (both Title II of the U.S. Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act of 2010 and the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Act) and the United Kingdom. The resolution regimes of France, Germany and the United Kingdom will automatically be amended and updated to reflect these jurisdictions’ implementation of the EU’s Bank Recovery and Resolution Directive. Resolution regimes of other countries that are members of the Financial Stability Board will be covered in the future, as they are developed, to the extent they meet certain requirements (e.g., equal treatment of creditors, no temporary stay exceeding two business days, protection of netting and set-off rights, and either suspension of payment and delivery obligations under the master agreement with respect to both parties during the stay or a requirement that the failing or failed financial institution perform its payment and delivery obligations under the master agreement during the stay).
- If an adhering party is not subject to regulations by January 1, 2018, that prohibit such adhering party from entering into any transactions documented under ISDA Master Agreements that do not include provisions similar to those in the Protocol, the Protocol includes a mechanism for any other adhering party to opt out of the Protocol with respect to that particular counterparty and SRR.

Opt-in to Eligible Special Resolution Regimes

- Through the Protocol, an adhering party opts in to the resolution laws governing its counterparty, and certain of its counterparty’s related entities, that enter an SRR in a covered jurisdiction. In particular, this means that parties in many cases will give up the right to terminate trades governed by an ISDA Master Agreement and to claim under a related guarantee if the counterparty (or any of certain related entities of the counterparty) becomes subject to an SRR.
- If a direct counterparty becomes subject to an eligible SRR (the “Party in Resolution”):
 - The non-defaulting party is entitled to exercise default rights under the relevant ISDA Master Agreement or a related credit support document, such as a guarantee (including a credit support document provided by a related entity¹ of the Party in Resolution, as long as the related entity has adhered to the Protocol) only to the same extent it would be able to do so under such SRR if the ISDA Master Agreement or credit support document were governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR. Thus, for example, if the applicable SRR imposes a stay on the termination of derivatives contracts, the non-defaulting party will be subject to the same stay, even if the relevant ISDA Master Agreement is governed by the law of a different jurisdiction.

- If the Party in Resolution's rights and obligations under the relevant ISDA Master Agreement, or a credit support document entered in connection with the ISDA Master Agreement (including a credit support document provided by a related entity of the non-defaulting party, as long as the related entity has adhered to the Protocol), are transferred to a successor of the Party in Resolution pursuant to such SRR, the transfer will be effective to the same extent that a transfer of an ISDA Master Agreement or a credit support document governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR would be effective under the applicable SRR. Such a transfer is binding on the non-defaulting party (or its related entity), notwithstanding any provision of the ISDA Master Agreement or credit support document that would otherwise prohibit the transfer.
- If a related entity of an adhering party becomes subject to an eligible SRR (the "Related Entity in Resolution"):
 - Under the ISDA Master Agreement, a party has the ability to exercise default rights if an entity listed in the ISDA Master Agreement as a "specified entity" or "credit support provider" of its counterparty enters insolvency proceedings or defaults under certain other obligations. The Protocol limits these rights. Under the Protocol, if a related entity of an adhering party enters an eligible SRR, the non-defaulting party is entitled to exercise default rights under the ISDA Master Agreement with the adhering party or a related credit support document (including a credit support document provided by the Related Entity in Resolution or any other related entity of the adhering party, in either case, as long as the related entity has adhered to the Protocol) only to the same extent it would be able to do so under such SRR, if the ISDA Master Agreement or credit support document were governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR.
 - If the Related Entity in Resolution's rights and obligations under a credit support document entered into by the Related Entity in Resolution in connection with the ISDA Master Agreement with the adhering party are transferred to a successor of the Related Entity in Resolution pursuant to such SRR, then, as long as the Related Entity in Resolution has adhered to the Protocol, the transfer will be effective to the same extent that both a transfer of a credit support document governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR, and a transfer of a credit support document governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR that supports an ISDA Master Agreement governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR, would be effective under the applicable SRR.
 - For as long as a default right is not exercisable under an ISDA Master Agreement covered by the Protocol or a related credit support document as a result of these provisions, any event of default or similar event specified in the ISDA Master Agreement or credit support document that gave rise to the default right shall be deemed not to be occurring or continuing for purposes of determining whether an event of default or a similar event under any other agreement has occurred or is continuing, to the extent that such cross-default rights would be unenforceable if the ISDA Master Agreement or related credit support document were governed by the law of the home jurisdiction of the SRR. As a result, a non-defaulting party is potentially stayed from exercising both direct default rights under the relevant ISDA Master Agreement and any related credit support document, and cross-default rights under any other agreement, if its financial institution counterparty (or a related entity) is subject to an eligible SRR.

- For example, if a bank (“Bank A”) defaults under an ISDA Master Agreement with a fund (“Fund B”) due to Bank A entering an eligible SRR, but Fund B is prohibited by the Protocol from terminating trades under the ISDA Master Agreement, Fund B also will not be able to call a default under other agreements (e.g., Master Repurchase Agreements, securities lending agreements, or any other trading agreements) between Bank A (or any related entity of Bank A) and Fund B as a result of the provision in the ISDA Master Agreement that provides that Bank A entering into the SRR is an event of default. However, if the other agreements have independent terms identifying entering an SRR as an event of default, Fund B may be able to call a default under those terms.

Limitation on Exercise of Default Rights upon Other U.S. Insolvency Proceedings

- The Protocol also incorporates provisions that restrict important creditor rights that otherwise would be available to a counterparty of a financial institution that becomes subject to a U.S. Bankruptcy Code proceeding, or certain other U.S. insolvency proceedings other than SRRs.²
- If a direct counterparty becomes subject to a U.S. insolvency proceeding that is not an SRR: Notably, unlike in the event of a direct counterparty entering an SRR, the Protocol would not limit a non-defaulting counterparty’s right to exercise default rights in the event that its direct counterparty enters other U.S. insolvency proceedings. For example, if Bank A enters a U.S. insolvency proceeding when Fund B has outstanding transactions with Bank A under an ISDA Master Agreement, the Protocol would not prohibit Fund B from exercising default rights with respect to those transactions.
- If an affiliate³ of the direct counterparty becomes subject to a U.S. insolvency proceeding that is not an SRR:
 - As noted above, under the ISDA Master Agreement, a party has the ability to exercise default rights if an entity listed in the ISDA Master Agreement as a “specified entity” of its counterparty enters insolvency proceedings or defaults under certain other obligations. The Protocol limits such rights in the event that a “specified entity” enters U.S. insolvency proceedings. If the “specified entity” is not a credit support provider of the direct counterparty, the non-defaulting party can only exercise default rights under the ISDA Master Agreement or a related credit support document that are “Performance Default Rights” and “Unrelated Default Rights,” which may be exercised at any time. All other rights to exercise default rights are suspended.
 - “Performance Default Rights” generally include default rights that arise due to (i) the direct counterparty entering insolvency proceedings; (ii) the direct counterparty’s failure to satisfy payment or delivery obligations under the ISDA Master Agreement, credit support document, or certain other types of transactions (including, for example, “specified transactions” and “specified indebtedness” as defined in the ISDA Master Agreement); or (iii) the failure by a credit support provider to satisfy a payment or delivery obligation.
 - “Unrelated Default Rights” generally include (i) default rights that are not based solely on the affiliate entering into U.S. insolvency proceedings and that can be shown “by clear and convincing evidence” to be unrelated to the affiliate entering into U.S. insolvency proceedings; and (ii) default rights based solely on an affiliate of the direct counterparty becoming subject to insolvency or resolution proceedings (other than U.S. insolvency proceedings), as long as a U.S. parent of such direct counterparty is not subject to a U.S. insolvency proceeding. This standard may be hard to meet if the parent and the affiliate default at the same time.

² The term “U.S. insolvency proceeding” includes bankruptcy proceedings under Chapter 7 or Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, proceedings under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act that commence upon the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation being appointed as a receiver, and proceedings under the Securities Investor Protection Act.

- If an affiliate that is a credit support provider of the direct counterparty becomes subject to a proceeding under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code:
 - If the affiliate is a credit support provider of the direct counterparty and the affiliate becomes subject to proceedings under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, the non-defaulting party will be able to exercise only Performance Default Rights and Unrelated Default Rights. The Protocol will suspend the non-defaulting party’s right to call a default on any other basis during a temporary stay period, which is the longer of 48 hours and one business day. Following the temporary stay period, the non-defaulting party may not exercise default rights (other than Performance Default Rights and Unrelated Default Rights) if certain conditions are met. Generally, these conditions include that the party in Chapter 11 proceedings either (i) transfers the guarantee to a transferee (including a bridge institution) that meets certain qualifications; or (ii) remains obligated under the guarantee as a “debtor in possession” and satisfies certain conditions, including that the party in Chapter 11 proceedings files an order with the bankruptcy court that would give priority to any payments due under affected credit support arrangements over payments due to other creditors.
 - In such a scenario, both parties must continue to perform under the ISDA Master Agreement. If the direct counterparty fails to perform under the ISDA Master Agreement, the non-defaulting party can exercise default remedies.
 - Similarly, if the affiliate is a credit support provider of the direct counterparty and the affiliate becomes subject to proceedings under the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Act (FDIA), the non-defaulting party will be able to exercise only Performance Default Rights and Unrelated Default Rights. The Protocol will suspend the non-defaulting party’s right to call a default under the ISDA Master Agreement on any other basis during a temporary stay period, which is the amount of time that a stay would apply to a “qualified financial contract” under FDIA Section 11(e). The non-defaulting party will be prohibited from terminating the contract following the stay period if the contract has been properly transferred to a successor by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Tables summarizing the matters described above are included on the following pages.

Summary of Changes: Eligible SRRs

	Direct Counterparty in SRR	Related Entity of Direct Counterparty in SRR
Default rights under ISDA Master Agreement and Credit Support Document	Subject to same stay that applies under law of the SRR.	Subject to same stay that applies under law of the SRR.
Transfer of ISDA Master Agreement	Binding on non-defaulting party if transfer is effective under law of the SRR.	Not applicable to ISDA Master Agreements, but ownership of direct counterparty may change if related entity is a parent.
Transfer of related Credit Support Document	Transfer of rights and obligations of direct counterparty under Credit Support Document binding on non-defaulting party if transfer is effective under law of the SRR.	Transfer of rights and obligations of related entity of direct counterparty under Credit Support Document binding on non-defaulting party if transfer is effective under law of the SRR.
Cross-default rights under ISDA Master Agreement arising from defaults under other agreements	Subject to same stay that applies under law of the SRR.	Subject to same stay that applies under law of the SRR.
Cross-default rights under other agreements arising from events of default (or similar) under ISDA Master Agreement	Subject to same stay that applies under law of the SRR.	Subject to same stay that applies under law of the SRR.
