Litigator Timothy Farrell represents companies, private-equity sponsors and nonprofits. He's representing Duff & Phelps in Sears Holdings' post-bankruptcy adversary proceeding brought by unsecured creditors. And he won relief for juveniles subjected to unconstitutional mechanical restraints and solitary confinement at Iowa Boys State Training School. Farrell was among a core group of Ropes & Gray partners who gained expertise in the litigation and regulatory risks around the CARES Act passed in the wake of the pandemic and advised clients on issues around PPP loan funding. This summer, Farrell started a program for students from underserved communities to expose them to the legal profession. Farrell is a classically trained singer and before law school had a performing career.
