ED KELLY is a retired partner of Ropes & Gray. After many great years with Ropes & Gray, he now runs a small patent prosecution firm focused on helping early-stage innovative companies. Patent prosecution work has always been a favorite part of Ed's practice, as it provides daily interaction with exciting innovations and people from the local engineering and science community. It also gives Ed a chance to work with excellent young people interested in making a career in patent law, a part of the job Ed has always enjoyed and takes seriously. Ed is a registered practitioner at the U.S. and European Patent Offices. He is studying to get his diploma in European patent litigation under the new unitary patent system. Along with his co-authors, he also continues to edit and update the book European Patent Law for US Attorneys.
