

MEMME ONWUDIWE

EVP of Legal and Business Intelligence
Evisort

MEMME ONWUDIWE is part of the founding team of Evisort, a legal AI company, and currently serves as Executive Vice President of Legal and Business Intelligence. Founded out of Harvard Law and MIT, and backed by leading venture funds including Microsoft’s M12, General Atlantic and TCV, Evisort uses artificial intelligence and advanced contract lifecycle management functions to help companies negotiate, organize and extract data from their contracts. Evisort’s AI solutions are relied on by companies like Western Union, Microsoft and Bank of New York Mellon who need visibility and understanding across massive sets of business documents to drive efficiencies. Memme is a Lecturer at Harvard Law School, teaching the course “Start-up Entrepreneurship and Innovations in Legal Technology.” He co-founded the Harvard Law Technology Symposium as a student, and is currently an entrepreneur-in-residence at the Harvard Innovation Labs.
